

Business & Industry – Presentation or Workshop

Format: 45 - 60 minute keynote or Half-day workshop

It is estimated that workplace bullying costs the Australian Economy $36 billion per year.

Employers

Had some managers not spoken up for Carolyn – risking their own careers – she possibly would not be here today to tell her story and help others. They were strong people who recognised an injustice and rather than bury their heads in the sand, they chose to speak out, to take action and try to help. Little did they know, at the time, but their actions probably saved a life and will continue to help others now by Carolyn being here to share her story.

Organisations also have to consider the business impact of having bullies in their workforces. With bullied staff members feeling additional strain, potentially falling ill more frequently and likely to consider quitting their jobs, bullying has a direct impact on productivity and profits.

Employees

Employees who face bullying in the workplace may experience a number of issues, including stress, depression, illness, insomnia and even suicidal behaviour. These consequences influence the workers' lives inside and outside of the office, infiltrating all areas of day-to-day activities, family life and broader social engagement.

Carolyn has lived through this and survived to tell her story. She lets the victims know they are not alone and that they can speak out. She lets the offenders know, in no uncertain terms, of the impact they are having on their victims and to seriously reconsider their behaviour.

Carolyn's presentation will help to increase staff morale and productivity in your workplace by encouraging your people to think outside of the box, in new and exciting ways, about what they can do to eradicate discrimination and bullying in their own workplace.
